MYTHS AND REALITIES ON SEXUAL ASSAULT

MYTH: Women encourage rape by wearing sexy, suggestive clothing. If someone dresses conservatively they are less likely to be raped.

REALITY: Research consistently shows that rape is about the need to act out power and control, not what a person wears. In fact, women and girls have been raped while wearing everything from pajamas to jeans to business suits.

MYTH: Most rapes occur in a dark alley by a stranger.

REALITY: About 75% of rape victims are assaulted by someone they know . . . intimates or acquaintances. This could include dates, family members, boyfriends, and husbands.

MYTH: If a woman consents once to sex with someone, she can't ever be raped by him. If she knows him or is in a relationship with him, she can't be raped.

REALITY: Coercing or forcing someone to have sex against their will is sexual violence. Knowing, dating, being married or related to, is not a license to rape.

MYTH: He's attractive and successful. Anyone would want to be with him. He couldn't be a rapist.

REALITY: Rapists come from all types of backgrounds and all walks of life. Money and success does not preclude committing a crime, but in some cases it has helped avoid a conviction.
